

2019 election results in coal seats

The LNP performed significantly better in coal seats

- For the purposes of these slides "coal seats" are defined as Flynn, Capricornia, Dawson and Herbert. The Hunter has not been included because the Nationals did not run a dedicated campaign there.

WHAT THE CFMEU SAYS ABOUT LABOR'S PLAN

"The question I have is this: I would like to know what the members I represent in places such as Moranbah, Tieri or Middlemount are going to 'just transition' into.

We work for a long time to get our conditions and entitlements to where they are at. I cannot see an industry coming in to replace the work that my members currently do—or their children." – Steve Smyth, CFMEU District President Mackay

LABOR HAS DOUBLE STANDARDS ON COAL: CFMEU

The CFMEU has accused the Palaszczuk government of double standards by ... blocking Adani's $2bn Carmichael thermal coal project, in the Galilee Basin.

If the CFMEU doesn't trust Labor on coal - how can you?

- Labor's Just Transition Authority policy was a sleeper issue and helped link them to the Greens. Labor's own policy said they would "implement pooled redundancy schemes" for coal miners and coal power station workers.
- A website link was sent out on the day before the election

The LNP did well

- The pro-coal campaign run by the LNP has turned four previous marginal seats into safe seats.

There was a surge for minor parties

- The LNP vote did not suffer from the rise of right wing minor parties. A very different outcome than the first rise of One Nation in 1998.
